CELEBRATING

25 YEARS

1982-2007

Great is God's Faithfulness

PERSPECTIVE, They Say, is Everything

“And, with the normal allowances for human foibles and warts, we can look back at the first 25 years of Redeemer and acknowledge the blessing of God in providing us dedicated visionaries who sacrificially went beyond the call of duty.”

— Ray Pennings,
Board Chair

Some might suggest that recognizing Redeemer's twenty-five years as a Christian university seems trivial when laid beside the almost 400 years of history, since individuals with Congregationalist connections formed Harvard in 1636, or even the almost 250 years since Reformed folk in New Jersey started Rutgers University in 1765. Historical perspective, however, is sobering. We feel small compared to the intellectual accomplishments of institutions with histories more storied than ours, but we also recognize that these institutions are no longer branded by the purpose and vision they started with.

The task of the Board of Governors is to focus on the long-term direction of Redeemer University College. Governance is distinct from administration. Our task is to hire leadership for the University, give them the resources they need to do their jobs well and to provide accountability while supporting them on behalf of the community we serve. And, with the normal allowances for human foibles and warts, we can look back at the first 25 years of Redeemer and acknowledge the blessing of God in providing us dedicated visionaries who sacrificially went beyond the call of duty. Not only is our 34 hectare campus a comfortable and functional home for an educational community, the range of programs Redeemer offers and the reputation they have garnered is also impressive. The mostly favourable mention of Redeemer in the Globe and Mail's 2007 University Report Card is external validation of our accomplishments. But to rest on those laurels is to miss the point.

A Christian education is to engage the culture. Our students and scholars must confidently interact with our neighbours, challenge them with tough-minded thinking and honest arguments based on truth. That is a tradition that goes much deeper than Redeemer, Rutgers or Harvard. We can go back to the words of the Saviour who told us to love God with our hearts, our minds and our souls and to love our neighbours completely as well. Understanding God's world requires us to peel back to knowing God himself.

Most elites in our culture of “establishment unbelief” scorn the idea of one truth or one God. However, our mission is to teach and research in a way that is Scripturally-directed and “explores the relation of faith, learning and living from a Reformed Christian perspective.” It really is a mission to keep the “uni-” in university. And with God's help, we pray that this may be the defining perspective of Redeemer's future. ■

WHAT'S INSIDE

Welcome to a special issue of Images. Throughout the year, we have been marking Redeemer's 25th Anniversary.

In the centre of the magazine, you will find an insert that tells the story of how Redeemer has experienced God's faithfulness through our first quarter-century. It also gives us the opportunity to share with you, our dedicated and generous support community, how we have kept our promise to provide a Christ-centred university education that furthers the Lordship of Jesus Christ.

We hope you will enjoy, and be encouraged by, reading where we have come from, where we are and where, with the Lord's blessing, we hope to go.

Off to a Good Start

Twenty-five years ago, Redeemer opened its doors and welcomed 97 students. Ten years later, 447 students were enrolled, and in 2002, 718 students graced the halls of the University. Today, Redeemer is home to 885 students, representing 900% growth in 25 years.

For 2007-08, Redeemer's enrolment stands at 818 Full-Time Equivalent (FTE) students. That number is down slightly from last year, which was expected since the so-called "double-cohort" graduated this past May. The number of new full-time students at Redeemer this year rose to 250, up from 242 last year.

A number of institutional changes – the 1998 degree change, the name change in 2000 and the approval to grant the Bachelor of Education degree in 2003 – have contributed to enrolment growth. But, according to Ms. Marian Ryks-Szelekowsky, Vice President of Enrolment and Student Development, a better understanding of the type of programs that Redeemer offers and an increased recognition of the quality of Redeemer's programs has also played a huge role: "Over time, preconceived notions and perceptions have slowly disappeared and we are being recognized for who we are."

Redeemer's Recruitment staff also play a large role each year in raising the awareness of Redeemer. "Our University Representatives are working very hard in an increasingly competitive environment to inform prospective students and their parents about what Redeemer has to offer," notes Ryks-Szelekowsky. ■

Some other numbers on the 2007-08 student body:

- 250 - full-time students who are new to Redeemer
- 26 - percentage of new students who did not start directly after high school; they either took a year off before starting, are mature students, transferred from other colleges or universities, etc.
- 31 - part-time students in the Bachelor of Education program who have transferred from the Bachelor of Christian Education program
- 8 - provinces represented (missing Newfoundland and Labrador and Manitoba)
- 61 - percentage of new students who received an academic scholarship

Marva Dawn returns to Redeemer

Internationally renowned theologian, author and educator Dr. Marva J. Dawn will be the keynote speaker at Redeemer's annual lecture series, The World and Our Calling, on Wednesday, January 16, 2008.

The theme for this year's Series, "Vocatio and Cosmos: Our Calling in the World", draws on I Corinthians 8:4-6. Dr. Dawn will be giving three presentations that day:

- 11:00 am: Cosmos: the Nature of our gods.
- 3:00 pm: Vocatio: Recovering our Stolen Intimacy.
- 7:00 pm: Vocatio: True Worship Every Second.

Dr. Dawn was most recently at Redeemer for the 2002 Minister's Conference. She holds four master degrees and a Ph.D. in Christian Ethics and the Scriptures from the University of Notre Dame. Currently she teaches Spiritual Theology at Regent College in Vancouver, BC. An author of over 20 books, she is also part of Christians Equipped for Ministry, and speaks around the world at seminars, conferences, churches and universities.

All three lectures are free and open to all. For more information, contact Ms. Marlene Raddatz at 905.648.2139 x4114. ■

Globe & Mail's University Report Card Gives Redeemer Good Grade

Redeemer University College earned an "A" in Overall Student Satisfaction in The Globe & Mail's University Report Card, released on October 16. The Report Card was based on student responses to a survey conducted by the Globe and Mail in cooperation with the Strategic Council of Canada.

Redeemer was also graded very well in several other categories, such as Student/Faculty Interaction. Emily Weening, a third-year student from Newmarket, ON, is in Dr. Russell Kosits' Psychology of Religion class. She values her interactions with Dr. Kosits because "he has the best balance of instructing course material and caring about students' lives, while maintaining a light and humorous attitude that keeps students relaxed and better equipped to learn."

For Dr. Kosits, Assistant Professor of Psychology, it is a natural outcome of the relationships he has developed. "It's pretty simple," he says, "I like my students!" He enjoys the "spontaneous interactions in the hall and sharing a laugh or two during lectures." His students "possess an admirable maturity and humility which makes them a pleasure to work with." In addition, they seem to "earnestly desire a Christian perspective in their courses," which gives Dr. Kosits and his students a "shared passion and orientation toward our studies."

The results of the Report Card are encouraging since the information comes from students, the people who really matter. The high marks are a testimony to the academic work and student development at the University. "It is important that Redeemer delivers the kind of experience that students appreciate and from which they can grow not only academically, but also personally and spiritually," said President Cooper. "We are extremely pleased to be showing such strong progress in the key areas of academic life and of student satisfaction." Erica Akers, a first-year student from Chatham, ON is certainly pleased with her experience thus far: "I couldn't be more satisfied with the sense of community here. I don't think I could place anything else above that."

Although overall the scores are high, nobody's perfect, and the students' responses identified a number of areas that need improvement. "We will continue working to better each student's experience. Listening to our students is key!" President Cooper said.

This was Redeemer's first year participating in the newspaper's sixth annual survey of student satisfaction. Fifty-three universities were graded by 43,222 Canadian university students who rated their experiences on a number of key criteria. Redeemer's full Report Card can be accessed at www.globeandmail.com/education. ■

With over 650 delegates from 150 countries, the IFES World Assembly was the largest, most diverse group that Redeemer has ever hosted.

Redeemer Welcomes the World

By Darlene Komadan

Redeemer University College and International Fellowship of Evangelical Students (IFES) began working together over four years ago to bring the IFES World Assembly 2007 to Redeemer, the largest single event that Redeemer has ever hosted. From July 11 to 19, Redeemer was the proud host to over 650 IFES delegates from 150 countries, as well as hundreds of volunteers and the IFES planning committee.

The common goal of the World Assembly is to broaden the future of global students and encourage their peers to spread the word of God. During the conference, IFES celebrated their 60th Anniversary with a cake decorated with flags from each country represented. Another celebration, Canada Day, was held on July 14 and showcased the cultural diversity of Intervarsity Canada, which sponsored the event. Over 900 people attended Canada Day, which featured worship, music, food and multi-cultural exhibits.

Since IFES was using the entire campus, Assistant Director of Campus Services, Yolanda Bax, worked to find facilities off-site to accommodate some of Redeemer's regular summer programs, such as the Continuing Education program and Summer Rays Sports Camp. Ms. Bax acknowledges with appreciation, the co-operative spirit of many groups and individuals that contributed to the huge success of this international conference.

Redeemer faculty and staff extended their hospitality and shared their homes with delegates. Conference and Special Events Coordinator, Darlene Komadan, had the pleasure of sharing her home and a traditional Croatian meal with delegates from Croatia. French faculty spent time with francophones from around the world. Many of them agreed to be taped while reading a passage of Scripture and then recounting what life is like for Christians in their country. Dr. Thea Rusthoven commented on some of her interviews: "When I asked each one, whether from Madagascar, Cameroon, France or Martinique, what their greatest need was, I got the reply that it was Biblically-based leadership of all sorts...whether in the form of people or courses and books for seminarians, pastors, lay leaders, families, etc. Churches are growing so fast in Africa that leaders cannot be trained fast enough. As one way of answering that need, a professional Christian translator from Quebec, who was attending the conference, agreed to translate Prof. Al Wolter's book, Creation Regained, into easily readable French, but we need to find the money to do this..."

Many of the delegates shared testimonies of their wonderful stay at Redeemer. Since many of them live in fear of being a Christian in a country that does not support their beliefs, they enjoyed Redeemer's peaceful and safe campus. Director of Campus Services, Doreen Gringhuis, commented that "Redeemer University College has been truly blessed as a community to be able to open our doors to the world and serve our brothers and sisters in Christ. We were privileged to experience God's workings and share in the makings of what many have witnessed as one of the 'best' World Assemblies ever."

Working with IFES was an exceptional experience of years of intricate planning and it was difficult to say final good-byes. The Redeemer community will fondly remember the summer of 2007 as the year the world came to Redeemer. ■

Participants will travel back and forth in a luxury motor coach and spend three days on escorted tours, taking in sites, shopping and shows. Tickets to the Broadway show, "The Drowsy Chaperone," a harbour cruise, stops at Ground Zero and the United Nations are parts of the itinerary, but there is much more. Sunday morning is set aside for worship, either at Manhattan Church of Christ or at a local church of the participant's own choosing.

This is a very popular destination so book your tour early. For more information, please contact Verstraete Travel and Cruises at 1.800.405.6088. All net proceeds of the tour will support the Foundation's Student Scholarship Programs. ■

Tax Credit Breakthrough

The generous support Redeemer received at the Golf Tournament was not the only good news of the day. Over dinner, MPP Ted McMeekin announced that the provincial government had approved an Order in Council to extend the tax credit that employers receive for hiring co-op students to Redeemer University College. This means that now Redeemer's co-op students can apply for placements on the same basis and standards as publicly-funded colleges and universities.

It has taken two and a half years of prayer and work to secure this change. At the dinner, President Cooper thanked Mr. McMeekin for his tenacity and his advocacy on this issue, and praised God for His glorious answer to prayer. ■

All events are held on Redeemer's campus at 777 Garner Rd. East, Ancaster unless otherwise noted. For tickets or more information, please call the Box Office at 905.648.2139 x4211, or visit www.ticketwindow.ca to purchase tickets on-line.

Remembering a Student Leader

Craig Allan Vanderveen

The Redeemer community was shaken this past summer with the passing of Craig Vanderveen, a fourth-year student from Carman, MB. Craig, along with a friend, Denise Veendaal, was killed in a car accident while visiting family in Manitoba.

A former Student Senate President, Craig was a much-loved and admired leader on campus. He was majoring in both Business and Political Science, and had plans to work for the government in international relations or business after graduating. Craig also worked in Redeemer's Communications Department for two summers.

Craig was the oldest of four children and is survived by his parents Allan and Anita Vanderveen, his brothers Scott and Dylan and sister Ashley. He also leaves a host of friends in both Manitoba and at Redeemer.

One of Craig's friends, Chris de Winter, remembered Craig with these words: "Remember your Creator in the days of your youth..." (Ecclesiastes 12:1a).

This was the text for Craig's funeral, and it represented him so well. A former Student Senate President and Treasurer, Craig was also active in the University's A-Team and a leader of the Young Peoples at his church. In all these things, Craig understood and embodied the Christ-like pattern for leadership. Yet, one of the remarkable things about Craig was his humility; despite his leadership capabilities, his academic prowess and his incredible popularity amongst whomever he met, Craig was always humble and serving.

Craig had a personality that drew people to him and he radiated love and acceptance. For Craig, cliques were an anomaly of the past because people from any circle of friends or social community were welcomed into his life. It is clear that in all these things Craig was motivated by Jesus' command to "Love each other as I have loved you" (John 15:12). By these things, and innumerable more, Craig taught us about the struggle to bring every square inch of life Coram Deo, before the face of God and to His glory. Now in death, Craig is teaching all of us to praise God through tears and pain – even without our understanding.

Until that better day when all the saints are gathered together we remember our brother Craig Vanderveen, by striving to imitate his Christ-like leadership: fighting for truth, living for justice and through it all embodying the passion and love of Christ. ■

A Time for PRAYER

Part of the Redeemer contingent that gathered at Queen's Park to call for an end to poverty.

“It’s with experiences like this that we, as students, are able to extend our learning outside of the classroom and see the real life application of what we read about in our textbooks.”

The study and practice of prayer has garnered much attention at Redeemer over the past year. A number of recent initiatives organized by students, staff and faculty, reflect that increase.

At the end of September, the entire Redeemer community — faculty, staff and students — gathered for Prayer Day. The central event for this day was an extended Chapel Service where the entire community gathered in prayer. Such was the institutional commitment to this event that classes were shortened to accommodate the service. Throughout the day and into the evening, there were a number of structured and more informal times of prayer and worship.

Prayer Week, on the other hand, has been a tradition at Redeemer for four years. This 24/7 commitment of devotion saw students, faculty, staff, residents and others sign up to pray for an hour at a time for seven consecutive days. The prayer room, which was set up in Augustine Hall, included a thanksgiving wall, a crying out wall, materials for drawing out implorations and benedictions and maps of Hamilton and the world, which encouraged followers to pray in a variety of ways. By the end of the week, 168 hours of service had been given to God and the walls were covered with accounts of prayer and praise to Him.

Also coming out of Prayer Week, a number of Redeemer students and faculty members joined 400 others, including many church and faith groups, in downtown Toronto for a march against poverty on September 26. The group congregated at Queen's Park to demand that those running for provincial office take action towards reducing poverty. For the marchers, it was a reminder that God has the power and authority to influence and change actions, and that supporting this work requires perseverance and dedication to prayer and action.

Redeemer student Rachel Bokma felt honoured to be a part of this “eye opening experience,” marching on behalf of her brothers and sisters for what she refers to as “the least of these.” She states, “It’s with experiences like this that we, as students, are able to extend our learning outside of the classroom and see the real life application of what we read about in our textbooks.” ■

PROMISES KEPT

Redeemer University College is celebrating its 25th Anniversary this year. We have much to be thankful for – not the least of which is how we have realized God's promise of support (Matt. 28:20). Over the years this often has been manifested through the prayers and gifts of our faithful and generous supporting community.

Redeemer has made a promise as well – one that is found in our mission – to provide a quality Christian liberal arts and sciences education and to promote research and creative endeavour. It is a promise that we make to our students, our supporters and the community at large.

This is a communal quest and vision – realized by the dedicated efforts and cooperation of our faculty, staff and students working together. In these pages you will read how representatives of this community each contribute in the tapestry of our unique campus environment. These vignettes show how, with the Lord's blessing, we are keeping our promise through the teaching, learning, scholarship and service that makes Redeemer University College such a vibrant Christian academic community.

This report also provides a snapshot of Redeemer after our first quarter-century, where we have come from – and where, with God's continued guidance, we hope to go. Inspired by the all-embracing character of Christ's renewing work, our goal has and continues to be preparing students for lives of leadership and service to both the Christian and the wider community. We thank you for your support in making that happen.

AL WOLTERS

PROFESSOR OF RELIGION & THEOLOGY AND CLASSICAL STUDIES

When I first came to Redeemer more than 25 years ago, I promised myself that I would work hard in my new discipline of Biblical studies, that I would seek to inspire my students with the vision of seeing academic work as a glorious vocation of God, and that I would do these things—passionately—from a distinctively Reformed perspective. But the promises that have been kept were more God's than my own. To an extent far beyond any reasonable expectation He has blessed me as I did the research and teaching that I love to do. To my own consternation, He has prospered my work in Biblical studies, in my academic writing and in my teaching. As God has blessed Redeemer, so He has blessed me—and

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF ENGLISH AND DEAN OF ARTS & FOUNDATIONS

So you'd like to become a faculty member at Redeemer University College? Okay, here are the basics: you'll need (1) six or seven years of intensive study after your first university degree, (2) a gift for teaching: knowledge, passion and eloquence, (3) a deeply-rooted personal faith in Jesus Christ, (4) a commitment to integrate that faith with everything you do, think about, write and profess as a teaching scholar. Oh, yes, and (5) you'll have to get along with the rest of us—itself not always an easy task.

Last year we added four full-time professors to our faculty, and thirty-nine part-timers! The two deans on the academic side—myself and Doug Needham—help the Vice-President Academic to find and hire the best and brightest candidates for every one of these positions. It's not always easy: such people are rare. But to keep our promise, that a Redeemer university education will be distinguished by excellence and deeply thoughtful, critical analysis, we must continue to be diligent in our search.

STUDENT SENATE PRESIDENT

Looking back on my first years at Redeemer, I never would have imagined myself serving as the Student Senate president. I felt as I'm sure others have before me – that other students were more qualified to lead the student body. However, I now see that as we step out and follow Christ's call – even as we measure of our abilities – He upholds and teaches us how to serve and lead. In this way, Student Senate is instrumental in keeping Redeemer's promise to prepare students for lives of service and leadership. Such practical learning occurs not only through the relationships and experiences shared within Student Senate itself but also through student involvement in Senate sponsored clubs, such as downtown after school programs, the Green

Team, the Crown Church in the Box and many others.

Through the diverse parts of Christ's diverse body, Senate fosters this common vision of growing

students in Christian service and leadership.

SEEKING A NEW COURSE

As Special Needs Coordinator for 11 years, I have seen how God has led Redeemer in His faith. I have a vision – Redeemer's promise extended to every student's with special needs students who may not have had that opportunity 27 years ago.

We have seen the Redeemer community develop a culture of acceptance and giving. I have witnessed the overwhelming support and affirmation these individuals receive from faculty, staff and fellow students as they pursue their education. And as I look back on those students we have served, I remember vividly the outpouring of love and respect they received when they walked or wheeled, alone or with assistance, across the Auditorium stage at graduation to receive their degrees.

Our Lord has been truly faithful throughout our history. Redeemer strives to keep its promises by providing the support and accommodation that opens the door to Christian university education to as many students as possible.

CELEBRATING 25 YEARS OF GOD'S FAITHFULNESS

In September 1982, Redeemer opened its doors to students for the first time. On Saturday, September 29, the entire community gathered to mark the 25th Anniversary of that event and to give thanks to God for His great faithfulness through the years.

The day began with the Annual General Meeting for members of Redeemer. Following the AGM, there was a special banquet that honoured those who served on that first Board of Governors in 1980. Dignitaries from all levels of government gave greetings and offered their congratulations to Redeemer, and Rev. Dr. Henry De Bolster, Redeemer's founding president, and Rev. John Zantingh, who was Chair of that inaugural Board, reflected on their reliance on God's provision during those early days.

The centerpiece of the day was a Celebration Service in the Auditorium taken in by over 600 students, staff, faculty and friends of Redeemer. There we remembered moments, both somber and joyful, that have marked Redeemer's past, and offered praise to the One who made this day possible.

Redeemer's alumni also gathered to note their contribution to Redeemer's past as part of Homecoming. Throughout the presentations that were given during the program, it was obvious that these former students valued and were shaped by their Redeemer experience.

The capstone event of the day was a recital by members of Redeemer's music faculty. Renowned musicians such as Valerie Trvon, Paul Benton and Jane Ohermeyer, all of whom serve as adjunct instructors at Redeemer, provided a sample of the incredible talent found in the Music Department.

Throughout the day, which was marked by glorious sunshine, there was much time for fellowship among the supporters, faculty, staff and students. It was a fitting reminder that Redeemer, a community that is rooted in the centrality of Christ, has a reach and an impact that goes far beyond the walls of the campus.

CAMPUS SERVICES

Throughout its first quarter century, Redeemer has been a cultural and recreational asset, offering theatre and concert performances, public lectures and conference and athletic facilities that enrich the lives of the local community and the broader Christian community.

Redeemer University College is Hamilton's third largest conference services provider, welcoming over 60,000 visitors each year. Beyond the revenue this generates, Redeemer's profile is raised as guests from Hamilton and around the world take advantage of our facilities and services.

ALUMNI

Perhaps the best way to see how we are meeting our promises is through our alumni. Redeemer's 2700 former students can be found working in a wide range of businesses, social service agencies, ministries and public institutions. Approximately 34% of graduates have continued their education in professional and academic programs in more than 70 graduate schools across Canada, the United States and around the world.

Redeemer alumni are taking what they have learned here and going to neighbourhoods, churches, workplaces and schools across Canada and now reaching 30 countries, to lead lives of leadership and service to the Christian and the wider community.

FINANCES

Redeemer remains committed to being faithful stewards of the resources with which it is entrusted.

REMEMBERING 25 YEARS OF GOD'S FAITHFULNESS

The 2007-08 academic year marks the 25th Anniversary of Redeemer University College. Looking back, we have been able to see God's hand throughout the ups and downs of our history. It is, above all, a story of God's faithfulness.

Although there had been talk of establishing an undergraduate university in Ontario with a Reformed Christian basis as early as the mid-1950s, Redeemer's history really began in 1975, when a detailed investigation was undertaken by a feasibility committee. From that work the Ontario Christian College Association was formed in 1976, with a mandate to open such an institution as soon as possible.

There were many obstacles to starting a Christian university in Ontario – the provincial government was opposed to opening any new universities; public universities were wary of a faith-based institution; the logistics and the finances were daunting; and there was no guarantee that faculty or students would come. However, the faithful visionaries behind the project – led by Rev. Henry R. De Bolster, who would go on to become Redeemer's founding president, persevered, and on December 12, 1980, the Ontario Legislature passed Bill 48, "An Act to Incorporate Redeemer Reformed Christian College." With the granting of this charter, Redeemer College could become a reality.

In September 1982, Redeemer opened its doors to students for the first time. The first campus consisted of a former elementary school on Hamilton's Beach Strip and rented townhouses in Burlington. There were eight full-time faculty members and ninety-seven students that first year. By 1985, there were about 250 students, and Redeemer had outgrown its rented facilities.

Redeemer purchased 76 acres of land in Ancaster for the construction of a new campus, which opened in 1986. In November of that year, the college had its first Commencement, with 40 students graduating. Over the years,

REDEEMER'S FOUNDING PRESIDENT

Redeemer's campus has grown to 85 acres (35 hectares), and become an important resource to the local and broader Christian community.

In 1987, Redeemer achieved another milestone when it was admitted as a member of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. And over the years, Redeemer's provincial charter has been amended a number of times to:

- Give Redeemer the authority to grant Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science degrees (1998).
- Change the official name to Redeemer University College (2000) and
- Give Redeemer the authority to grant the Bachelor of Education degree (2003).

There have, of course, been challenges and setbacks through the years. However, God's faithful provision, often manifested through the gifts and prayers of our dedicated community of supporters, has allowed Redeemer to become a "city set on a hill" (Matt. 5:14), a beacon for Christ's Lordship, in the academic community, the greater Hamilton area and for the extended Christian community.

LOOKING FORWARD TO THE NEXT QUARTER-CENTURY

— FRANK
KELLY —

We are encouraged that Redeemer is establishing a reputation for academic excellence and a spiritually vibrant campus community as well as for community service. As a faith-based university we have a public mission that seeks to impact our society through teaching, scholarship and service. We are proud of our students, as well as our first-rate faculty and staff, who carry out this mission.

We are also thankful for the tremendous support we have received, enabling us to increase our enrolment, enhance our academic programs and develop our campus and facilities. With the continuing support of our various constituencies, we are encouraged by the possibilities for further growth as we look to the next 25 years. With the Lord's blessing, we see

- The potential for increased enrolment to over 1000 students.
- Additional development in our undergraduate programs in areas such as social work, education, media studies and international studies.
- The opportunity to do more in the area of continuing education, to be a Christian centre of learning that serves not only high school graduates but also adult learners, professionals and leaders in various fields, including our own alumni.
- The possibility of offering a graduate-level program, beginning with an M. Ed. program, building on the growth we have already seen in the summer continuing education program.

Such growth will also require planning for additional facilities on our environmentally friendly campus, so that we can properly serve and retain a larger group of students. This would include

- A student/campus centre
- An athletic and wellness centre
- An intermediate size performance space and
- Additional student residences

As we see these visions and dream these dreams, we look to God's leading and direction, in keeping with our commitment to financial stewardship. As the Lord has blessed us over these past 25 years, we look to the future with confidence, as we continue to strive to be a Christian university dedicated to excellence in every area.

Redeemer Welcomes New Faculty

From around the world to our own backyard, Redeemer's new faculty bring a variety of experiences and talents to the lecture halls and laboratories.

Dr. Mary Ashun A World of Experience

Teaching at the university level requires lots of formal education. After living on three continents, Dr. Mary Ashun, Assistant Professor of Education, also credits her cultural education as being instrumental in her educational experience.

Born in Ghana, Dr. Ashun completed her first degree in England and received her Ph.D. in Buffalo, NY. Those experiences have given her the opportunity to appreciate African, European and North American cultures and perspectives, something she tries to incorporate in her work. For example, Dr. Ashun visited her native land in mid-October to do some research on the AIDS crisis. She is examining the way preventative information is delivered, taking into account the different cultural and social learning perspectives.

As part of Redeemer's Education Faculty, Dr. Ashun's focus is on teaching math & science. Her current research is on "How to Increase Mathematical Confidence and Competence in Pre-Service Elementary Teachers." Her philosophy is that a solid teacher "must be creative and knowledgeable."

Dr. Ashun is content being both a career and a family woman. She and her husband Joseph have three boys. Reflecting their African heritage and Western experiences, the boys have both African and English names. Dr. Ashun considers herself blessed to be sane with four "boys" in her life. Redeemer is blessed to have her on its faculty.

Dr. Kyle Spyksma From Scientist to Teacher

When your main form of transportation is a bicycle, it's good to know what the weather will be like. Dr. Kyle Spyksma, Assistant Professor of Mathematics and Physics and avid biker, was so concerned about it that he wrote a doctoral dissertation on the subject.

Formally, Dr. Spyksma's thesis is entitled "The Dynamics and Predictability of Moist Turbulence" but he also describes it as "Fun with Cumulus Clouds, the Fluffy Ones." All joking aside, he successfully completed this as part of the Ph.D. program from McGill University in Montreal this past summer and he is continuing his research in the area.

Dr. Spyksma is a Redeemer graduate from 2001 and is excited to have returned to the Redeemer community. He looks fondly upon his own experiences as an undergraduate, especially the relationships that he developed with many of his professors. In fact, Dr. Spyksma admits that Redeemer's faculty was a strong motivating factor in his decision to come back, even if it feels a bit strange. He is taking the place of Dr. Vince van Dijk, who retired this past year. While it may be challenging to fill the shoes of his former instructor and mentor, Spyksma enjoys teaching and looks forward to the challenges of a university professor.

Dr. Spyksma hopes to increase the course offerings in the Physics Department enough so that students can graduate with a major in the field. He is also determined to demonstrate that there does not need to be any dichotomy between Christians and science. "You can be a Christian and still love and be excited about science."

Prof. J. Bernice Stieva Building a Community for All

As an elementary school teacher for 17 years, Professor J. Bernice Stieva, Sessional Lecturer in Education, has seen it all: she has taught in Ontario and Alberta, from kindergarten to grade eight, in regular and double-graded settings and special needs students in a withdrawal program. Whatever the circumstances however, she has always been motivated to build community in the classroom. Professor Stieva delights in seeing children help, respect and accept one another. Therefore, she considers it mandatory for teachers to love their students by respecting them through words and actions. Her goal at Redeemer is to infuse in her students the ability to teach children to "work hard and learn smart." "Learners are learners yet all are unique," she says; there will always be those who think differently and others who catch on more quickly. Ultimately, she wants students to be equipped with the skills and discernment so that they can discover their own God-given talents. With these tools, students can go on to discover God's work and His plan for their lives.

Professor Stueva received her undergraduate degree at the University of Guelph, majoring in Child Studies. She later earned her Bachelor of Education and her Masters degree at Brock University. This semester she is teaching Children's Literature and Educational Psychology and next semester she will be leading classes in Language Arts and Reading Remediation.

After all that she has seen at the elementary level, Prof. Stueva is looking forward to facing new challenges in the university classroom, helping students develop their own philosophies on teaching.

After completing his Ph.D. at the University of Akron in Ohio, Burlington native Dr. David Zietsma has returned to Ontario to accept a position as Assistant Professor of History. Prior to his doctoral work, Dr. Zietsma earned an Honours B.A. from McMaster University and a Masters degree from the University of Waterloo.

While residing in the "mid-west", Dr. Zietsma learned much about American culture, living through the effects of Katrina, experiencing first hand the hectic pace of a presidential election campaign and participating in inter-city ministry. Not surprisingly, the focus of his work as American history, particularly U.S. involvement in World War II.

Dr. Zietsma will be teaching several courses in American history this year, and his research in the area has also been published. "So Has No History: Religion, National Identity, and U.S. Intervention, 1937-1941," was printed in the journal Diplomatic History, and "Building the Kingdom of God: Religious Discourse, National Identity, and the Good Neighbor Policy, 1933-1938" will be published in a forthcoming issue of Rhetoric & Public Affairs. Currently, Dr. Zietsma is in the process of transforming his dissertation into a book manuscript.

History, according to Dr. Zietsma, "provides a window to see how societies have interacted in the past in order to better understand human behaviour and interaction in the present." To make the connections, he hopes to challenge his students to think "outside the box" and to see how and why the study of history replaces—clay, red ■

With Sadness but with Many Thanks...

Mr. Rob Harvey, Associate Professor of Business, left Redeemer to return to the private sector. We wish him God's blessings in his new endeavours.

Redeemer is also blessed by the contributions made by a number of part-time and sessional instructors. Most are graduate students or hold down full-time positions outside of Redeemer.

* FIRST TIME INSTRUCTORS

Two Awards

Rachel Bokma from Schubencade NS, was awarded an In-Course Scholarship from the Canada Millennium Scholarship Foundation. Funded by the federal government, this award is given to students who have completed their second year of post-secondary education and are considered as leaders, innovators, academic achievers and who are involved in the community.

Redeemer nominated Ms. Bokma because of her contributions to the community both at home and in Hamilton. At Redeemer, she has been a leader for a community service team, member of the A-Team (student volunteers for the Recruitment Office) and Spiritual Activities and Services Committee and a volunteer at Christian Refuges and Mission Services. Redeemer congratulates her for the well-deserved honour.

The Hamilton Spectator honoured Dr. John Boersma, Professor of Business with the Publisher's Award for Educators at the Industry-Education Council of Hamilton Breakfast this past October. Recipients are recognized for their contributions in bringing business together with educational institutions. Dr. Boersma was given the award for his work in starting Redeemer's Business Co-op program.

Super Summer Science Camp

Nine 8-14 year old "Junior Agents" reported to Redeemer University College on July 30. For a week of investigation, problem-solving and scientific research as part of a new program called the Super Summer Science Camp.

The "Senior Agents" – Adjunct Lecturer in Biology, Jennifer Chang, Vanessa Chung, '05 and Redeemer student Laura Bortolotto – organized and facilitated the program, which was designed to teach children about forensic science and how to use science to solve problems that arise in criminal investigations.

At Super Summer Science Camp, the junior detectives solved a new crime each day. They were witnesses to such things as vandalism in the lab and theft of a science class skeleton. After observing the scene, taking photographs and collecting evidence, the Junior Agents were taken back to the lab and shown how to use science to determine who committed the nefarious deeds.

Redeemer staff and faculty offered their assistance by playing out roles of suspects and culprits, and allowed the Junior Agents to fingerprint and photograph them.

By the camp's conclusion, the Junior Agents were crime-solving experts. They had been involved in several scientific activities such as blood typing, fingerprinting, chromatography, soil analysis, foot print plaster casting, entomology, lip print analysis, invisible ink, hair and fiber analysis and protein, peroxide, sugar and starch testing. ■

COME WALK WITH ME: Our Family's Educational Choices

By Debra A. Van Pelt

Our eldest daughter, like most children, had looked forward to starting school. For some time she and her sister had been creating imaginary worlds in which they would live for days, often based on the novels we'd read together that involved the most basic of toys—not much more than dolls, dishes and dress-up clothes. Although they were simple, her preschool years had been rich.

Several months into kindergarten, the crevice on the floor between her bed and the wall had become her place of refuge on the mornings she would be summoned for school. My heart ached for our child, whose vivid dreams for discovery and fulfillment at school were not coming to pass.

My year as a Bachelor of Education student in the pre-digital world left me with an Education Act on my shelves and while searching through it during the Christmas holidays, I noted as though for the first time that formal education was not compulsory until a child was six. With one phone call, our five year old left the world of kindergarten and almost unintentionally, our adventure of walking together as a homeschooling family began.

In hindsight, our wander through a decade of non-school-based education, eventually involving all three of our children, included a number of phases and the reasons we continued to choose this form of education changed as the years unfolded. Certainly as an educational option in the mid-1990's it was still quirky, an educational anomaly in which the general public felt most empowered to accost all children seen in public during school hours and to interrogate them on their knowledge of, say, addition facts or on how they liked their teacher. Thankfully a decade later it was viewed as one reasonable educational option amongst many, and most universities, for example, would consider applications from students educated in this manner.

While the reasons may have changed, our perspective of honouring our children's insights remained in tact. As we guided our children to the literature, the poetry, the music and the art that had stood the test of time, and while we carefully selected activities for their involvement, we allowed their responses to each to inform how we would progress.

We treated the world as a banquet table, our books and our experiences as our food and together were nourished as we learned what we loved.

As I began thinking more deeply about education, its purposes and desired excellences, its processes, means and strategies, I began formal study of educational policy and leadership, all of which eventually resulted in my teaching in the Department of Education at Redeemer University College.

Time has passed and our children now attend schools, thriving places where they have experienced expasions of knowledge and engaging opportunities. But there are no years that have taught us what to love or what we love quite as much as the quiet ones of banqueting together at home. ■

Engaging Students ... Encouraging Support

New Student Awards Program Launched

Redeemer alumni have been increasingly active in their support for Redeemer University College and its students. In response, the Alumni Board has been examining how it can be more effective in presenting opportunities to alumni who wish to financially support Redeemer.

One of the central questions that the Board asked was "Where would most alumni like to see their donations go?" Since most alumni have experienced the challenge of funding their education, the overwhelmingly response was to direct any support to students through bursaries, scholarships and similar awards.

As a result, the Alumni Board is pleased to announce the Redeemer Alumni Association Student Awards Program or RAASAP, a new alumni-specific initiative to provide financial assistance for students. RAASAP will offer two types of awards:

- » Alumni Leadership Awards, $2000 scholarships given to a student entering his or her final year of study and who is maintaining a GPA of 8.0 or better; and
- » Alumni Leadership Bursaries, Valued at $1500 each, awarded to returning students who demonstrate financial need. The recipients must be full-time students with good academic standing.

It is hoped that these awards will enable students to continue their studies at Redeemer and encourage them to remain involved with Redeemer both as students and after graduation. The first RAASAP awards – one scholarship and two bursaries – have been distributed for the 2007-08 academic year. Although administered by the Financial Aid Office, the Board is involved in selecting the award winners. Funding for RAASAP will be provided » Only alumni will be asked to support this program.

» Alumni will be approached on an annual basis, normally in May of each year.

A portion of the funds that are collected will be applied directly to the awards that are distributed each year.

» The balance of the funds raised will be deposited into an endowed account. Over time, this fund will generate enough interest so that additional awards will be contributed.

The Board has a broad vision for RAASAP. It sees the number of awards and the value of the award increasing over time. It also strongly endorses RAASAP. As a group, the Alumni Board has committed $10,000 to "kickstart" RAASAP. Half of that – $5,000 – has been awarded to this year's RAASAP award winners. The other $5,000 has been set aside for the start of the endowment which we hope to grow over time.

In the next few weeks, you will receive a brochure inviting you to participate in RAASAP. We hope that you will give generously. It is a tangible way to demonstrate our support to Redeemer and its students.

For more information on RAASAP please visit www.redeemer.ca/alumni/support ■

Over 70 alumni, faculty and friends participated in this year's Homecoming, which was planned as a part of Redeemer's 25th Anniversary celebrations on September 29. For many alumni, it was a fitting capstone event to the day, a chance to mingle with old friends and catch up with faculty.

Although Redeemer's Pioneer Class – and faculty – were recognized throughout the dinner, Homecoming gave a glimpse into several eras of Redeemer's history. A number of alumni were invited to share their own experiences of what Redeemer was like when they were attending. From that first class of 97 students, through the years on the Beach campus, the first year at the new campus and through the years of rapid growth, what was striking was not just how much things have changed, but how much things have remained the same. In particular, each of the speakers noted the sense of community that has always been a part of the Redeemer experience.

Reverend Dr. Henry R. De Bolster, Redeemer's founding President, offered greetings and expressed his appreciation for the commitment that students have made to Redeemer over the years. Dr. Justin Cooper shared with alumni his vision for Redeemer over the next 25 years and Alumni Board President, Sharon Timmerman Vandermeulen, outlined some recent Alumni Board initiatives, including the launch of the Redeemer Alumni Association Student Awards Program (see p. 16).

As Redeemer begins its next quarter-century, the Alumni Association is also looking at the programs it is organizing. After careful consideration at its November 2nd meeting, the Board decided that it would no longer be hosting annual Homecoming celebrations. Alumni Board past-president, Kevin Huinink '98, notes that, "These types of large, broadly-focused events just don't seem to be attracting the number of alumni that we thought they would. As a Board, we think it's time to reconsider what types of activities better interest and suit alumni."

The Board will be looking to organize events that will be more targeted to specific groups of alumni. Watch upcoming issues of Images for more information on these initiatives. ■

Athletic Fees to be Delayed

Since September, alumni have been charged $100 for an annual membership fee to Redeemer's Athletic Centre. Following discussions between the Athletic Centre staff and the Alumni Board, that fee will not be charged until September 1, 2008.

A letter has been sent to all alumni who have been affected by this, outlining the decision and providing information on how to obtain a refund for any fees that have been paid this year. The Alumni Office will be providing more information on this in the near future.

We recognize that this decision could have been better communicated. Thank you to those who raised the issue.

This past fall one of Petra Zantingh's senior level art classes was commissioned to design worship banners that reflect the theme of Redeemer's 25th anniversary, "Great is God's faithfulness." The students were encouraged to represent the theme visually, using colours that harmonized the existing colour schemes in the auditorium. Two of the banners designed were used during the 25th anniversary celebration in September. Jimmy Bender, Julianne Konyndyk, Angela Poot and Heather Wonder designed some of the banners that have now become a regular part of our campus worship.

This year, as we celebrate 25 years of God's faithfulness to Redeemer University College, we also wish to thank you — the many friends who are an integral part of the Redeemer community — for your generous and faithful support throughout our first quarter-century.

The faculty, staff and students of Redeemer wish you God's richest blessings in this Christmas season. May it be a time for you and your family to remember and reflect on God's great faithfulness in your lives.
